

My Village News

OCTOBER 2026

Delivered FREE to 10,000
homes and businesses

Hello and a very warm welcome to our October My Village News,

The season is now on the turn, after a dry and sunny summer, the rain has replenished our water butts, and we are now having to mow the lawns once again.

We received a timely poem from one of our readers, John Hollins, you can read it on page 28

David Hayns has sent through one of his historical articles that are always well received this month - King William's Special Military Operation.

Bunbury Gardening Club sent through some photographs of their village show earlier in September, a successful and enjoyable day, see page 54.

See you when we are out and about

MVN were invited to review Carden Arms Tilston and found rustic charm, home-reared beef and genuine hospitality

There is something reassuring about a pub that stays true to its roots, and the Carden Arms in Tilston achieves exactly that. Combining traditional country pub character with a strong commitment to local produce, it offers an authentic dining experience that feels both welcoming and unpretentious. The fact that the pub's beef is sourced from cattle raised on its own nearby farm adds a genuine farm-to-fork element that is reflected throughout the menu.

Our visit began with a friendly welcome from manager Ashley, whose warm approach immediately put us at ease. Throughout the meal we were looked after by Kate, whose service was exemplary. Professional, attentive and genuinely personable, she ensured everything arrived promptly and was always on hand when needed without ever being intrusive.

The restaurant offered a relaxed and pleasant setting, busy enough to create atmosphere yet not so crowded that conversation became difficult. Meanwhile, the adjoining bar area was clearly a favourite with local regulars, whose cheerful conversations created a lively backdrop and reinforced the impression of a pub that sits at the heart of its community.

We decided to stick to two courses, so for the mains, Emma chose the Carden Farm Sticky Chilli Beef Salad. The dish showcased the quality of the beef beautifully, with tender pieces of meat complemented by a subtle chilli kick and fresh salad ingredients. The balance of flavours was spot on, making it a delicious way to enjoy the local beef. Adam chose for his main course the Famous in House Hereford Steak & Guest Ale Pie, a classic pub dish executed with confidence. Fully enclosed with shortcrust pastry was a rich beef filling enhanced by a separate source pan of jus. Triple cooked chips and seasonal greens completed the dish. It was hearty, comforting and exactly the food one hopes to find on the menu of a traditional country pub. Dessert proved equally enjoyable. The Espresso Crème Brûlée delivered a smooth, creamy texture with delicate coffee notes and a perfectly caramelised topping.

Alongside this, the Carden Farm Apple, Plum and Pear Crumble provided a wonderfully comforting finish. The combination of fruits created a depth of flavour that was both sweet and pleasantly sharp, while the crumble topping added a satisfying crunch. Excellent food, locally produced ingredients and genuinely welcoming service combine to make this a destination worth visiting. With Ashley and Kate providing a memorable front-of-house experience, and a warm atmosphere shared by diners and regular locals alike, this is a pub that successfully blends quality dining with traditional hospitality. A thoroughly enjoyable meal from start to finish.

Transformation by John Hollins.

Oh, yellow cornfield- so serene,
 Majestic since your change from green,
 Innocently, here you stand,
 So unaware of what's at hand,
 The summer sun has swelled your grain,
 Assisted by some gentle rain,
 Just the occasional breath of air,
 Ripples through your golden hair,
 A huge red ogre approaches now,
 'Massey' stamped across his brow,
 Pauses briefly- gate open wide,
 In he comes- won't be denied,
 His sickly smile does not conceal,
 His cutter-bar of shiny steel,
 And all across his mouth so wide,
 Are razor teeth from side to side,
 That spring to life with noisy whir,
 Lightning fast, in deadly blur,
 And metal tines like spikey claws,
 The crop into it's mouth it draws,
 Oh, gently waving, golden hair,
 Your days have passed with ne'er a care,
 There was no way you could have known,
 Your fate was sealed when you were sown,
 Now from this field, you'll disappear,
 Yet the ogre will return next year,
 And once again with little trouble,
 Golden hair becomes just stubble.

At a glance

- Trusts can reduce IHT and add control, but they come with their own rules and potential tax charges.
- Around 121,000 trusts were set up in the 2024/25 tax year, up from 115,000 in the previous tax year.¹
- From April 2027, pensions will become part of people's estates for IHT purposes.

Benjamin Franklin, a founding father of the United States, once famously said "the only things certain in life are death and taxes."

Nor was he wrong. Here in the UK, taxes have risen steadily under successive governments. These include increases to capital gains tax and corporation tax in recent years. Meanwhile, freezing the thresholds on income tax levels has seen many more people dragged into higher and additional rate tax bands.

And, from April 2027 – less than a year away – most unused pension assets will fall into the scope of people's estates for IHT purposes, increasing the value of the estate. If this exceeds the IHT threshold, the estate (and beneficiaries) could be hit by a 40% tax charge on the surplus above the threshold.

The IHT nil rate band – the threshold above which IHT is payable – has been fixed at £325,000 since 2009 and will stay at this level until at least 2031. Yet if it had grown in line with inflation, it would now be £525,000.

It's not surprising therefore that growing numbers of people are turning to trusts in a bid to reduce their liability to inheritance tax. Figures from HM Revenue & Customs show that around 121,000 trusts were set up in the tax year 2024/25, up from 115,000 the previous tax year.

Reasons to Trust

IHT is charged on the value of your estate when you die. One straightforward way to reduce a future IHT bill is to give money or assets away while you're alive. If you live for seven years after making the gift, it normally falls outside your estate for IHT purposes.

The catch is that an outright gift is a gift. Once given, you may not be able to control how it's used – which may matter if you are looking to help family financially. For example, if you gift money to an adult child and they then go through divorce, your gift could form part of a divorce settlement. Alternatively, any money gifted could be vulnerable to creditor claims or poor spending decisions.

Trusts can be a way to make gifts with more structure. Under the terms of a discretionary trust, the trustees (people you appoint) decide who benefits, how much they receive and when. The settlor – the person setting up the trust – can leave guidance in a 'letter of wishes' which can be updated as circumstances change.

Trustees can also use trust funds in practical ways. For example, a trust might buy a property that a beneficiary can live in. Because the trust owns the asset, it may offer more protection than gifting the money to the beneficiary directly.

Protecting assets

Trusts can also help with planning across generations. For example, you might want to give money to an adult child, but they may worry that receiving it outright will increase the value of their estate for IHT. With a discretionary trust, the assets can potentially sit outside beneficiaries' estates while still being available for their benefit.

However, HMRC applies specific IHT charges to some trusts — particularly discretionary trusts — partly because the assets may not be taxed as part of anyone's estate on death.

How the charges work

Discretionary trusts face potential IHT charges every ten years, known as periodic charges. Each trust has its own nil-rate band (currently £325,000). If the trust's value is above that band at the 10 year point, the excess may face a charge of up to 6%.

As an example:

- You place £300,000 into a discretionary trust (below the £325,000 nil-rate band), so there's no immediate IHT to pay.
- By year 10, the trust is worth £400,000.
- The value above the £325,000 nil rate band – £75,000 in this case – is potentially subject to a 6% charge. This liability would fall on the trust.

Even with periodic charges, a trust may still be more tax efficient than leaving the money outside the estate where it might otherwise be taxed at up to 40% upon death. However, it will depend on the size of the gift, who needs access, and the wider estate plan.

Retaining access to funds

A common question is whether you can reduce the value of your estate but still have access to the money. Sometimes trusts can help, but the rules are strict. The wrong setup can mean the money is still treated as part of your estate for IHT.

For example, if you 'give' money away but keep benefiting from it (such as taking income back from the gift), HMRC may treat it as a 'gift with reservation'. In that case, it can still count as part of your estate for IHT.

One option sometimes discussed is a discounted gift trust (also called a discounted gift arrangement). Broadly, you place a lump sum into a trust for beneficiaries while retaining a right to regular withdrawals*. It can offer IHT benefits in some cases, but it's complex and needs specialist advice. Subject to eligibility and HMRC ratification. Exact amounts of discount will only be calculated if death occurs.

Trusts can be powerful, but they're not "set and forget" — and many are difficult or impossible to unwind once established. If you're considering a trust, take professional advice so it fits your family's needs, your tax position and your long term plans.

The value of an investment with St. James's Place will be directly linked to the performance of the funds selected and may fall as well as rise. You may get back less than the amount invested.

The levels and bases of taxation and reliefs from taxation can change at any time. Tax relief is dependent on individual circumstances.

*Please note that if the withdrawals taken exceed the growth of the Bond, the capital will be eroded.

Trusts are not regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority.

The story behind Journey To Space

I'm Faye, I live in Spurstow, I'm crazy about animals (especially pugs!) and line dancing - and I genuinely love sorting things out!

I set up Journey to Space around 18 months ago after realising how often I was helping friends and family declutter and organise - and that this was something people genuinely needed help with.

As a child, I loved tidying my friends' bedrooms, and I've always enjoyed making spaces work better.

I'm also one of those strange people who loves a house move(!). Give me some boxes and a marker pen and I'm happy! But I have realised what feels straightforward to one person can feel completely overwhelming to another. Helping my husband find a system that worked for his clothes taught me there's no one-size-fits-all version of an organised home. What works brilliantly for one person might be completely impractical for another.

Our possessions can take up much more than physical space, too. That room you've been meaning to sort, the pile waiting to be dealt with or the cupboard you try not to open can sit on your mental to-do list for years! That's part of the reason behind the name Journey to Space - creating physical space, but freeing up a little headspace too.

I know that asking someone into your home can feel like a big step, particularly if you're already feeling overwhelmed by it. People sometimes worry that they'll be judged or feel they ought to tidy before I arrive. Please don't! There's no judgement and absolutely no need to make things look better for me first.

I'm not there to tell you to throw everything away or create something that belongs on Instagram. I'm there to help you make decisions, keep things moving and make an overwhelming job feel manageable.

You might be surprised by how much can change in just a few hours. Often, tackling that one area gives people the motivation to keep going elsewhere too.

An organised home doesn't have to be perfect. It just needs to make your life a little easier.

Journey to Space – creating space for what matters most.

KING WILLIAM'S SPECIAL MILITARY OPERATION

David Hayns

'The King (William the Conqueror) had great thought and very deep conversation with the council about this land, how it was occupied, or with which men. Then he sent his men all over England and had them ascertain ... what or how much each man had who was occupying land here in England, in land or livestock, and how much money it was worth'. So says the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, written originally during the reign of Alfred the Great (c.886-899) but subsequently updated a number of times. The results of King William's great survey were all written down in Domesday Book, which was principally a record made for tax purposes. The original book (which I saw on display during its 800th anniversary in 1986) is preserved in the National Archives. It remains the major source of information about England in the years following the Norman Conquest of 1066.

Various modern translations from the Latin original are available and they make very informative reading, once you get used to the expressions and abbreviations used by the Norman scribes. The survey took place in 1086, twenty years after the Conquest, and includes information about the value and state of each manor, at that date and in 1066. That means that it tells us something about the drastic changes resulting from William's ruthless 'Harrying of the North' during the winter of 1069/70 when he sent his armies into Cheshire and neighbouring counties to punish those who still resisted him. Using 'scorched earth' tactics, he laid waste to the northern shires before relieving the existing Anglo-Saxon aristocrats of their positions and replacing them with Norman overlords. Examining Domesday Book for what it says about manors or townships in the My Village News area, I found that the Norman army appears to have come into the district by way of the former Roman military road, running through or close to Whitchurch (Mediolanum), Tushingham, Malpas, Tilston and Coddington, then on through Aldford and Eccleston into the fortress at Chester (Deva). All of these townships are recorded as 'waste' in 1086. However, it seems that the Sandstone Ridge may have proved a deterrent to the military since the townships on or close to it, including Hampton, Larkton, and Broxton were not laid waste. Also it is interesting that the three townships with 'bury' ('burgh') place-name endings (Norbury, Marbury, Bunbury) also escaped the 'harrying' and one is led to wonder whether they still retained some form of the defences which had given them their names. 'Burgh' implies a defended site.

The whole terrifying operation, although on a lesser scale and without the horrific devastation caused by modern weaponry, does seem like an ancient predecessor to Russia's current 'Special Military Operation' in Ukraine, of which the evil horrors are still being revealed while I am writing this. The results of that operation may not be written down in a modern version of Domesday Book but will be preserved for many years to come in newspapers, television news archives, and other media.

Live in care vs care homes: What is right for your family?

When considering long-term care, families face a deeply personal decision: live in care or moving to a care home? There is no single right answer, as every person has unique needs, preferences, and daily routines.

At Radfield Home Care Tarporley & Mid Cheshire, we support local families through every stage of this choice. While both options provide safety, understanding key differences in lifestyle, independence, and costs can offer peace of mind.

Lifestyle and daily independence...

Care homes provide structured routines, timetabled meals, and communal spaces. While this offers social contact, it can mean giving up everyday freedoms. With live in care, life continues on your terms. Support fits around existing routines; whether that is tending to the garden, keeping pets, or enjoying local village activities. Remaining in familiar surroundings helps older people stay connected to what matters most.

Dedicated, one-to-one attention...

In a residential setting, staff care for multiple residents at once. Live in care provides dedicated, one-to-one support from a small, consistent team of Care Professionals.

This continuity builds trusting relationships; ensuring your loved one is supported by someone who truly understands their individual preferences, from how they take their tea to their favourite morning routine.

Understanding costs and value...

Care home fees are charged per person, which can become costly for couples. Live in care provides one-to-one support charged per household, making it a highly practical and cost-effective option for couples who wish to stay together at home.

Most importantly, live in care allows individuals to remain in the home they love without the emotional upheaval of moving.

Here to help you explore your options...

Choosing care is a deeply human decision. We offer free, friendly care consultations to help local families explore their options with clarity and confidence.

Any questions around you or your loved one's care needs please just get in touch with the team at Radfield Home Care based here in Tarporley High Street.

Malpas Flower Club

September was a very special month for Malpas Flower Club as we celebrated the beginning of our 65th Sapphire Anniversary Year. To mark this wonderful occasion, we were delighted to welcome Donald Morgan from Aberystwyth who entertained and inspired us with his fabulous floral demonstration entitled "Celebrations". Our members were thrilled to have the opportunity to win one of the gorgeous arrangements in our prize draw and take a piece of the celebration home with them. We also enjoyed a glass of celebration fizz and a delicious anniversary cake, making the afternoon extra special as we raised a toast to 65 wonderful years of the Club. It was a lovely afternoon filled with flowers, friendship and celebration and a fitting way to begin such a special anniversary year for Malpas Flower Club.

Next meeting will be held on Monday 19th October at 2pm at the Jubilee Hall, Malpas. We look forward to welcoming members, new and old to continue our celebrations throughout this very special 65th Sapphire Anniversary Year.

SHOCKLACH

Shocklach Gardening Group Our next meeting is on Monday 19 October 2026. Our speaker will be Lisette Davies, head gardener at Plas Newydd, who gave us a wonderful talk in July about weeds. Lisette is Dutch. She grew up in Hillegon, a ten-minute cycle ride from the famous Keukenhof tulip gardens. So bulbs for Lisette are an ingrained part of her life, rather than just part of her job. Her talk "Bulbs: A Dutch heritage" will tell us all about the history, development and use of bulbs in your garden. Don't miss it!

The meeting starts at 7:30pm in the Chorlton & Cuddington W.I hall on Chorlton Lane, SY14 7EF. We look forward to welcoming everyone to hear this fascinating talk. Visitors are, as always, most welcome.
